

Strike Photos

Posted by Glenn on December 21, 2005 - 12:44pm in The Oil Drum: Local

Topic: Policy/Politics

Tags: automobile, hummer, mta, oil, peak oil, strike, traffic, twu [list all tags]

There are many great photos of the strike in the blogosphere, starting with the indispensable Gothamist, which has a good round up of all the different local photo slide shows. AD over at Startsandfits, has some great photos so does Curbed.

I started taking photos on 2 mile walk to work along 2nd Ave, but not all came out as well as I had hoped. Here's a few that were no blurry beyond recognition.

---

Up near my apartment, just south of the 96th street HOV entrance, 2nd Avenue was nearly vacant, providing a refreshing morning landscape free of honking horns and pollution.

But further down, near the entrance to the Queensboro (59th Street) Bridge, Traffic slowed to a crawl. Two points of interest in this photo:

1. A gas guzzling, oil dependence inducing HUMMER, complete with a support the troops ribbon and American flag. You sir, are a true patriot!
2. A BUS! It had little flashing lights in the front and had a sign saying it was just for Police department workers.

And local business like this bank were doing little things to make people's commutes a little bit more bearable in the cold.

Send in your photos of the strike or point us to where we can find more.

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 3.0 United States License.